

Dear Rob,

Welcome to the second email in your Ireland course!

Here are 8 reasons you're going to love Ireland.

Let's get down to business!

1. Wide Open Spaces, Pure Air

Escape to fresh air, empty roads and wide open spaces in Ireland's great outdoors.

Located on the extreme western edge of Europe, Ireland is sparsely populated. There are few major cities.

Even better, prevailing winds continually freshen the skies above Ireland. The Wild Atlantic Way has some wild Atlantic wind! Many points in Ireland

2. Famously Friendly Welcomes

Ireland and the Irish are famed for their friendliness.

The island is known as the land of one hundred thousand welcomes.

You are likely to be greeted with the phrase Céad Míle Fáilte at some point in your journey. In the Irish language, this literally means 'one hundred thousand welcomes to you'.

Travel to Ireland and you're sure to meet friendly locals. As we say here, 'there are no strangers here, just friends that you haven't met yet'.

3. Mild Climate

Ireland boasts a mild, temperate climate year-round.

There's only a 10°C (14°F) swing between the average summer and winter temperatures here.

When temperatures climb above 25°C (80°F), you'll hear Irish people start talking about a 'heatwave'.

Email Continues...